Davis Returns from Spanish Air Base

Wave 31 May 1984

MORON AIR BASE, SPAIN—A Heber City man, Alva B. Davis, returned home this week from a 16-day assignment to this Spanish Air Base near Seville in Southern Spain.

Technical Sergeant Davis is a member of the Utah Air National Guard and is assigned to the Consolidated Aircraft Maintenance Squadron (CAM).

More than 200 men and women of the Utah Air Guard participated in the training.

According to Lt. Col. Jon Heaton, Director of Operations for the mission, "this development provided members of the Utah Air Guard with excellent training. This base (Moron) has limited daily flying activity and, as a result, has few support facilities.

"Everything necessary for us to function as a successful Air Force Wing Group was provided by us; from the cooks and security personnel to the maintenance and supply functions. We even brought our own chaplain and safety officer.

"It was valuable too, because we are doing what we would be expected to do if and when we are called to active duty."

During the two-weeks in Spain, more than 40 refueling sorties were flown. Aircraft refueled included F-15 fighters, RF-4C reconnaissance aircraft and F-11 fighter/bombers stationed at various bases in Western Europe.

Lt. Co. Heaton added that all missions were flown on time and in the manner expected demonstrating the proficiency of the Utah Air Guard.

"In fact," he added, "we were able to fly additional refueling missions in Germany because the active Air Force wanted our assistance to meet operational requirements."

Colonel Lyle Rich, overall mission commander, explained that it is the intent of the Strategic Air Command (SAC), of which the Utah Air Guard is a member, "to provide Guard and Reserve units with as realistic training as possible. Because we never know where or when we might be called to fly, it is important for us to receive training in various weather conditions and at various flying locations worldwide."

The Utah Air National Guard is located on the east side of the Salt Lake City International Airport. It has more than 1400 members and has a number of refueling tankers assigned to it. Its mission, according to Colonel Rich, is to refuel American and Allied aircraft worldwide as necessary for them to accomplish their missions.

Alva Davis of Heber City returned home recently from a 16-day assignment to southern Spain with the Utah Air National Guard.

Here From Iceland

Gates Brothers in U. S. Marines

The Gates family is truly well represented in Uncle Sam's armed forces. The three boys pictured above, Jack, Harry and Charles Gates, are all enlisted in the U. S. Marines. They returned, last week from Iceland, where they have been stationed the past seven months, to visit in Heber with their father, A. F. Gates. The boys have been in the service for 18 months and are members of the same company and all hold the same rank.—that of private first class.

On their comments in regard to present conditions and their experiences in Iceland, they spoke very highly of the Red Cross and the work it was carrying on.

The boys left yesterday for San Diego, California, where they will be stationed indefinitely.

While living at Foxpart, Wyo., for six years where their father was connected with the Wyoming Timber company, the boys became familiar with the Norwegian language, spoken by the tie hacks, and so are able to understand the Norwegian speaking Icelanders better than they do some of the British soldiers.

Trained by their father in the use of firearms when they were young, all three boys have won recognition in the marines. Jack is a sharpshooter; Harry a marksman, and Charles an expert rifleman.

Navy Seaman Completes Basic Training

Daybell and other recruits so received instruction on the Navy's core values - honor, courage and commitment - and how to apply them in their military performance and personal conduct. Daybell joins 55,000 men and women who will enter the Navy this year from all over the country.

Men and women train together from their first day in the Navy just as they do aboard ships and at shore commands around the world. To reinforce the team concept, Daybell and other recruits also were trained in preventing sexual harassment and ensuring equal opportunity.

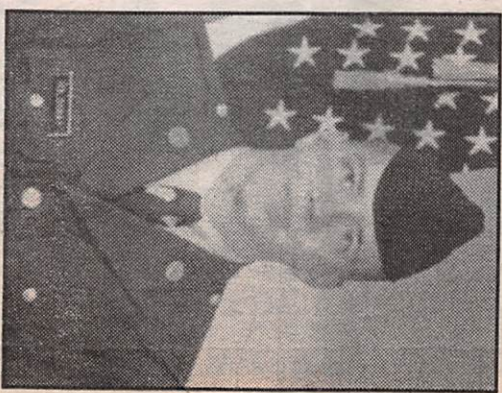

Even as the naval service gets smaller over the next few years, highly motivated young people like Daybell are still finding an opportunity to improve their knowledge and education as they become part of the most mighty technical naval force in history. This year alone the Navy will have more than 57,000 job openings and opportunities which include guaranteed training.

John David LENDA

Lenda Graduated from Naval Academy

7 June 1984

John David Lenda

ANNAPOLIS, MD—John David Lenda, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold H. Soderquist of RFD #1 Box 267, Heber City, Utah, graduated from the United States Naval Academy on Wednesday, May 23, 1984, and was commissioned Second Lieutenant in the United States Marine Corps.

At the Naval Academy, Lenda experienced four years of intensive academic, physical and professional training culminating with a bachelor of science degree with a major in Systems Engineering.

A significant part of the academic program is geared toward the engineering and science fields, with 80 percent of the midshipmen electing to major in a technical skill, and the remaining 20 percent opting for the humanities. In all, there are 18 majors available.

Professional military training is also a fundamental element in the Naval Academy's education program. This training is conducted at the academy during the academic year and, during the summer, at both shore stations and at sea aboard ships of the Fleet.

Physical development requirements at the Naval Academy are met through the physical education program, the intercollegiate program which offers 31 varsity sports, and the intramural program which offers 31 sports. All midshipmen are required to participate in a sport, either at the varsity or intramural level.

To accomplish the mission of training the 4,500 member brigade of midshipmen, the academy calls on its 550 faculty members, equally divided between civilian professors, who provide academic continuity, and naval officers, who rotate every few years to bring the latest experience from the Fleet.
